Demolition

Every new kitchen starts with a clean, careful demolition. York Kitchen offers two ways to clear the old kitchen away - a cabinet and backsplash demolition when only part of the kitchen is changing, and a complete demolition when everything is being replaced. Both are shown here in real York Kitchen projects, from the old kitchen to the stripped, ready space.

01 Cabinet & Backsplash Demolition

A LIGHTER DEMOLITION - ONLY WHAT IS CHANGING

Not every project needs the whole room stripped. In a cabinet and backsplash demolition, we remove only the cabinets and the backsplash - the parts being replaced - and leave the rest of the kitchen exactly as it is.

It is the right choice when the floor is staying, the appliances are staying, and the new work is focused on the cabinetry and the wall behind the countertop.

THE RESULT

Cabinets and backsplash gone, walls cleared - floor and appliances untouched.

WHAT COMES OUT - AND WHAT STAYS

- Out: wall and base cabinets
- Out: backsplash
- Out: countertops, where they are being replaced with the cabinets
- Stays: the existing floor
- Stays: appliances and the rest of the kitchen

BEFORE - THE OLD KITCHEN

AFTER - CABINETS & BACKSPLASH REMOVED

02 Complete Demolition

EVERYTHING OUT - A BLANK CANVAS

This is the full demolition, chosen when the whole kitchen is being replaced. We take the room back to its shell: every cabinet, countertop and finish comes out, the old floor is lifted, and the old appliances are removed.

What is left behind is exactly what a new kitchen needs - bare walls and a clean subfloor, with nothing old in the way of the measurement, design and installation that follow.

THE RESULT

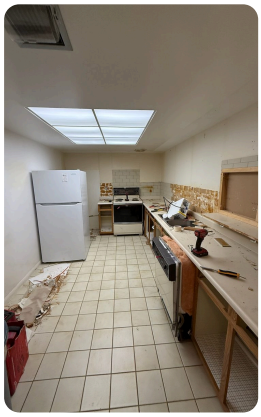

Bare walls and subfloor, cleared and ready for a brand-new kitchen.

WHAT COMES OUT

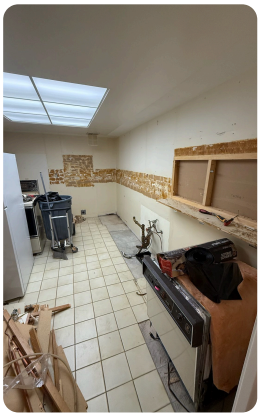

- All cabinets and cabinet boxes
- Countertops
- Backsplash
- Flooring, lifted to the subfloor
- Old appliances, removed
- Sink and fixtures, disconnected and removed
